AMUSEMENTS.

Grand-"The Love Chase." F. A. Everill, "leading old man" in Julia Marlowe Taber's company, is not the Marlowe mascot. Thursday night the drop curtain in the last act descended on his head and marred the finale of "As You Like It." It also badly barked Mr. Everil's nape so that last night he was forced to play Sir William Fondlove in "The Love Chase" with a stiff neck. In the second act, first scene, in the parlor of buxom widow Green (Rose Eytinge) Mr. Everill was the victim of another scenic accident more ridiculous even than that of the previous evening. Old Fondlove had called to lay his heart, hand and fortune at the widow Green's feet. The widow is "dead set" on marrying a young man of good parts who is in love with her maid. She is doing her utmost to fascinate the blind young lover when old Fondlove interrupts. He has an engagement ring which occupies the widow's attention long enough to let the young idol of her affection slip from the room, Discovering the youth's departure she turns on Fondlove with a tirade of abuse. She storms the stage, orders Fondlove to quit her sight forever and, in a beautiful fury leaves the room and the old love-sick taronet speechless with astonishment. That is the cue for a "flat" hall scene to drop in the first grooves. Last night the scene descended half way and there it stuck. It could neither be raised nor lowered. Everill waited a moment then ducked his head and rushed from the stage R. U. E. The descending scene is also the cue for the orchestra to strike up a twelvebar flourish, giving Everill time to get around to R. 1 E. and make his entrance in the Widow Green's hallway. After th orchestra had repeated the twelve-bar flourish about eight times, until the audience with laughter, had to be darkened and the curtain lowered, cutting the distinct acts. After the stage hands had removed the obstinate scene and substituted another the curtain was rung up and the play proceed ed. The accident was, of course, unlooked

As Con-stance Fondlove Mrs. Taber has a feathery role, requiring the lightest sort of comedy action which, therefore, is entirely within her ability. That she does not elaborate it more with those pretty little bits of stage business in which she, as Maude Adams, is so effective, is probably due to the lack of a competent stage director. Rose Eytinge is an undisputed star in "The Love Chase," there being no one else in the cast who could truthfully be said to rank with her. Robert Taber, as Wildrake, appeared to the worst advantage. There is absolutely no comparison between his work and that of Henry Jewett, the very able leading man with Miss Marlowe last season. It is essentially a romantic part, while Taber does better in leading "heavies." Coleman should have been given the part by all means, even if Taber had to take a night off. It is also quite a come-down from Walter Hale to William Owen as for and greatly interrupted the interest of the play. Such a "break" in a first-class

YOUNG WIFE'S DEATH.

Despondency Drove Her to Deliberate Self-Destruction.

Friends in this city of Mrs. Fred Davis, who was married a year or more since, were horrified yesterday at hearing of her self-inflicted death in Richmond yesterday morning. She arose before her husband was awake, took their baby from the cradle and laid it beside its father. Then she shot herself through the heart with a revolver. The day before she had attempted sulcide by shutting herself in a close room and turning on the gas, but was prevented from accomplishing the deed. She explained that she was despondent and did not know why she was impelled to desire death. Her husband, who is the youngest son of Dr. . Henry Davis, city health officer, talked with her when he returned from work at night, and says he thought he had removed the cloud from her mind. Her maiden name was Rosenbaum and she formerly lived in Sandusky. After her marriage she and her husband had lived here for a while. She left a note reading as follows:

"God knows why I do this. I have been despondent lately, but what about I do not know, as every one does everything to make me happy. I pray God to forgive me for this. I can be no help to any one on this earth as I feel, so I leave it to go to God knows where.'

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. LOGANSPORT, Ind., Dec. 14.-The Harris arrested at Cincinnati, accused of frauds in the sale of fuel gas stock, was not accused of victimizing the owners of the stock, but of selling his stock after he had already sold it. William Lowdentry. of New York, the second purchaser, is the accuser. Harris was a Boston Board of Trade man, who secured from patentee Hall a fuel gas process. A stock company, with Nelson Huston president, was organized, and Harris was eventually bought out. General Hardin and Congressman Proctor Knott, of Kentucky, were stockholders. A trial plant was put in at Maysville, Ky., and another at Connersville, Ind., both of which proved defective. The defect was remedied in a third plant, now in successful operation at Camistee, N. Y. J. E. Carpenter, of Washington, succeeded Mr. Huston as president last month. Hon. W. D. Owen, of this city, has an investment of $1,000 in the patent and considers it a good investment. A WILD YOUNG LOVER.

Isaac Bridges Shoots Sister of Girl Who Wouldn't Have Him.

Special to the Indianapolis Journal. TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Dec. 14.-Isaac Bridges, a young man employed at the tool works, shot and seriously injured Mrs. Joseph Montgomery last night about midnight as she was returning from the theater. He fired four times, and two of the bullets entered her back between the shoulders. The physicians have not found the bullets, and cannot tell how serious the injuries may be. Bridges has been the importunate lover of Miss Daisy Davis, a sister of Mrs. Montgomery, living in the Montgomery home. Miss Davis had repeatedly declined to receive Bridges, and he had talked wildly about killing her and her relatives, but his threats were not taken Mrs. Montgomery had advised her sister to discountenance Bridges's at tentions. The doubt is as to whether he was trying to shoot Mrs. Montgomery or had mistaken her for her sister. She was walking home with a Miss Gibson, when Bridges overtook them. He may have thought Miss Davis was one of the two, as she had expected to be with them, but instead had gone home another way. Bridges escaped from the city, and is thought to have gone to Shoals, Ind., where he has relatives. An officer went there this afternoon. Several months ago a barrel of flour in the Montgomery home was poisoned, and members of the family narrowly es-caped death. It is recalled now that this occurred on the day following a threat made by Bridges that he would kill all of the family.

He set about straightening up his business affairs. He had just finished a pike road for the county, and hastened to draw the money and pay his men. He told them he expected to die in a few days. He paid all his debts, took notes for all money due him, and his last act was to draw $100 from the bank for his funeral expenses. GERMANS DISCUSS OUR DIFFEREN-TIAL DUTY ON SUGAR.

that a Protest Has Been Made and Advises Hasty Action.

BERLIN, Dec. 14.-The Reichstag to-day discussed interpellations by Paasche and Friedberg asking the government to amend the law for the taxation of sugar in order to remove the injuries produced on the sugar industry of Germany by the imposts placed upon German sugar by foreign countries. Paasche said that the countries competing with Germany did not like Germany to reduce their bounties. The United States had, moreover, imposed an extra tax on German sugar. The position of the German sugar industry was most distressing, and it was very important that something should be done for an industry which employed 400,000 people. Overproduction was about the same in all countries, although its effects were not so serious in Germany because she had the leadership in the world's market. The danger arose from the depressed condition of husbandry. Paasche concluded with the recommendation that an increase be made in the export bounty on sugar. The proposal was cheered by the rightists, centrists and na-

Herr Von Kanitz expressed regret that the United States imposed a 40-per-cent duty on German sugar and claimed that the government should endeavor to obtain the abolition of this duty. He contended that the mere abolition of the small additional duty of one-tenth of 1 cent per pound on sugar imported from bounty-paying countries would not meet the case. He was opposed to the most favored nation clause and contended that the iliusion in President Cleveland's message to the sugar question would create no impression, and the United States Senate had already shown that it agreed with him. He concluded by expressing the hope that if the Germans found it impossible to raise the bounties it would at any rate maintain the existing bounties.

Von Bieberstein, Minister of Foreign Afairs, emphatically denied Kanitz's statements that one-tenth of 1 cent per pound sugar duty was of small importance, nasmuch as it violated the "most favored nation" clause of the treaty, while 40 per countries alike. He said: "That we concede the 'most favored nation' treatment to the United States without receiving anyto the treaty of 1828 we were bound to concede the 'most favored nation' clause, and since then we have repeatedly preferred claims against the United States govern-ment in this matter. Indeed, only in 1293 in view of the introduction of the McKinley bill we exchanged notes respecting the 'most favored nation' clause. The new United States tariff legislation unfortunately brought changes in this respect. As soon, however, as it became probable that the United States Senate would sanction the proposal for the differential treatment of German sugar, we did our utmost diplomatically to prevent the imposition of the proposed duty. I am bound to admit that we arrived at a complete entente with the United States government. Immediately the proposal for the additional duty became law we protested that it was a violation of the treaty of 1828. President Cleveland therepoon informed Congress of this matter and urged that the one-tenth of 1 cent per pound on sugar be abrogated. United States government thus fulfilled its promise. The final solution of the question rests with Congress. Therefore, it is incumbent on us to observe a certain re-serve, and be careful to avoid placing difficulties in the way of those who are striving to prevent the violation of the treaties Having on our part loyally and conscientiously fulfilled the treaty of 1828, we are entitled to expect similar treatment.

Hon. Mackenzie Bowell Will Form a Ministry for Canada.

LONDON, Dec. 14 .- The Times to-day definitely announced that the Hon. Mackenzie Bowell, Canadian Minister of Trade and Commerce, has consented to form a ministry for the Dominion of Canada. At the request of Sir Charles Tupper, the Canadian High Commissioner, William Reynolds Stevens and Joseph Whitehead to-day each took a plaster cast of the face of the late Sir John Thompson for the purpose of making a bust of the deceased Premier of Canada. The remains of Sir John were then placed in a lead coffin and removed to the Roman Catholic Church on Spanish place. The coffin, on arriving at the church, was covered with a pall of rich velvet with golden crosses and heavy fringe. Upon this the two wreaths placed by the Queen upon the coffin at Windsor Castle rested prominently. Lord Hawks-bury represented the Queen, and among those present were the Marquis of Ripon, Secretary of State for the Colonies; Sir Charles Tupper and Lady Tupper, who car-ried a beautiful floral cross, and Miss Thompson, daughter of the deceased Premier, who was deeply affected through-out the services. By desire of the Queen, Father Longinotto, of the Steward's Chapel, Windsor, celebrated the requiem mass at 11 o'clock. The service was very impressive, and lasted an hour. It was concluded by the chanting of the absolution, and then the remains were returned to the private chapel of the church, where they were surrounded by tapers.

The Armenian Commission. has consented that the consuls of Great Britain, Russia and France shall sit with the Armenian commission. This decision is regarded as a triumph for British diplomacy and it is also significant as indicating the existence of an Anglo-Russo-Franco entente. It is believed that the proposition to send Mr. Milo A. Jewett, the United States consul at Sivas, Asiatic Turkey, to investigate stories of Turkish atrocities in Armenia has been abandoned as the Porte jected to the American proposal of an dependent inquiry.

PERSONNEL OF THE NAVY. Important Measure Prepared by

Joint Committee of Congress. WASHINGTON, Dec. 14.-Acting under the instructions of the joint committee of the two houses of Congress on the personnel of the navy Representative Meier, of the commitee, has prepared a report and a bill. the latter of which embodies the changes which the committee will probably recommend. Neither the report nor the bill has vet been submitted to either the joint committee or the full committee of either house, but as they are in line with the views which the joint committee, after a year of investigation, has adopted, few if any changes are probable. The report calls attention to the evils existing under the present system, discusses the causes which have led to them and submits, in the shape of a bill, a general plan for reorganization. With reference to the line of the mavy the report points out that the active list will soon be brought into a cor You which, if not promptly arrested by pressional action, will impair the emciency of the naval serv-CONSTANTINOPLE, Dec. 14.-The Porte | ice "to a degree truly disastrous." It is pointed out that the stage tion in promotion now existing is a har ship, but that this disadvantage is an evi small in comparison with the danger resulting from a lack of experienced officers. It is recommended that there shall be no fewer than sixteen promotions annually to the grade of commander and twenty to that of lieutenant commander. It is recommended that the title of brigadier general be given to the colonel commandant of the marine corps, a retired list be established similar to that of the army for the enlisted men of the navy, and that the laws relative to citizenship in force for enlisted men of the army be applicable to the navy, and there should be a system of promotions from the ranks as in the army; that line and staff officers receive equal pay for equal rank, and it is pointed out that this change will work an annual saving of $195,000 to the government.

The bill which accompanies the report provides that the personnel of the navy Corps of the line, medical corps, pay corps. engineer corps, chaplains, naval construct ors, professors of mathematics, civil engineers, naval cadets, enlisted men. On the first day of July of each year, a sufficient number of graduates of the Naval Academy to fill vacancies in the total number of officers shall be commissioned as ensigns, not more than thirty-five to be so commissioned from any one class. The grade of commodore on the active list shall be commissioned as rear admirals. The rank of post captain is created for offi-cers on the active list who are entitled to the relative rank of commodore, and this will apply to those who are to retire. commissioned officers of the navy and those above the rank of lieutenant commander may be retired after thirty-five years of service, with the rank and three quarters the sea pay of the grade they hold. Promotion from the other grades of the navy, except in special cases, as now provided by law, shall be wholly by seniority, and shall be as follows: From the grade of lieutenant commander to that of commander, from lieutenant of the junior grade to that of lieutenant, and from ensign to lieutenant of the junior grade. It was especially designed for the treatment of chronic sick and the recuperation of those nervously exhausted who desire home-like comforts and restful surroundings, and it is certainly most admirably adapted to this purpose, as numerous readers of the Gazette can testify from actual experience. It has numbered many of the best and wealthiest people of Chicago among its patrons, but its prices are as reasonable as could well be expected for the accom-tions furnished. It is so quiet, so r so home-like, and yet with surrounding "New Point Comfort." Full particular concerning it may be obtained by address ing N. A. Pennoyer, M. D., Manager, Kens
